HAVE YOU DRIVEN A FORD...LATELY?

THE BODY AND THE SOUL.

Can a car really have a soul?

It's a question over which sports car enthusiasts are often given to pause.

Rather, they ask, isn't it the case that so many cars in this day and age – even sports cars – are manifestly soulless?

To drive them once betrays them as shallow. To buy them is inevitably a compromise.

But now, there's one sports car that rewards the driver with exceptional performance, conspicuous style, and 90's technology.

The body, as they say, is the temple of the soul. What kind of soul inhabits the new Ford Probe?

It is a passionate soul.

With a high-tech, 24-valve DOHC 2.5 litre aluminium EFI V6 under the bonnet, generating 121 kW of power at 5600 rpm, it could be nothing but.

213 Nm of torque, peaking at 5000 rpm, means off-the-line performance is brisk.

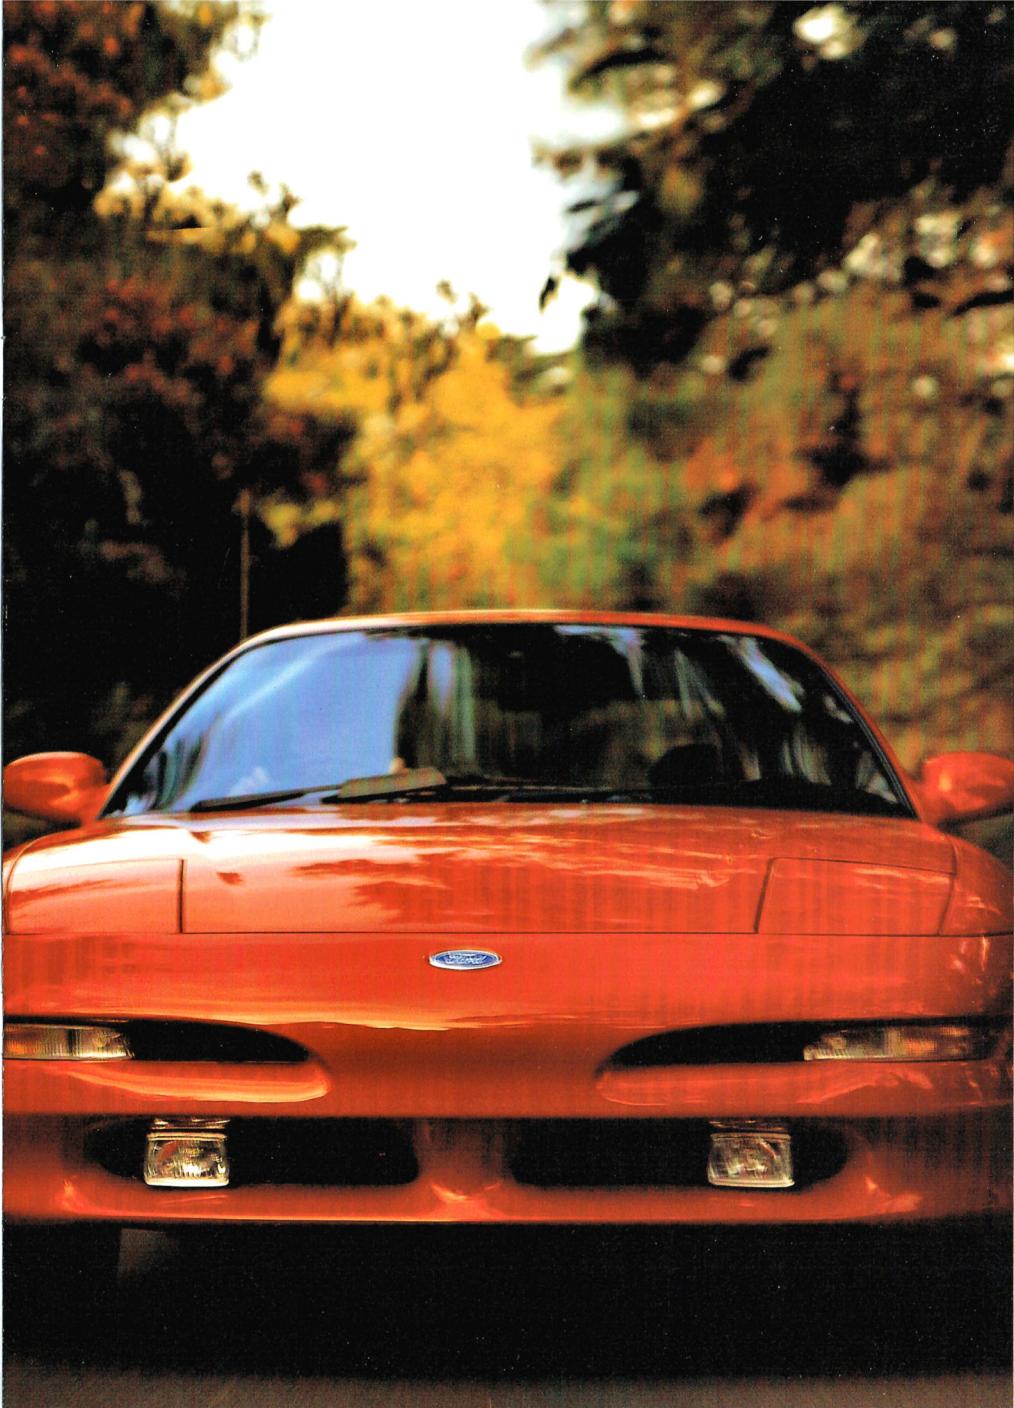

Probe's soul is sensitive as well as passionate.

Sensitive to the needs of the passenger. That's why Probe features two airbags, not one.

Sensitive to the world around it and the environment with CFC-free airconditioning and asbestos-free brake pads.

And sensitive to you, the driver.

Read on. And delve deeper into the soul.

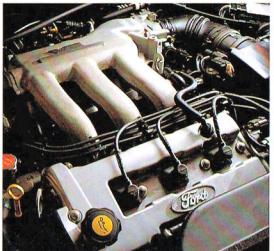

THE HEART AND THE MIND.

The heart. Nothing sets it racing like a drive in a sports car.

Especially when that car is a Probe. A five-speed, close-ratio gearbox with a short-travel sporting clutch gives you added control over Probe's performance. (For those who prefer it, a sports-tuned four-speed electronic automatic is available as an option.)

Handling is taut and precise. Independent suspension both front and rear smooths out rough patches and puts Probe exactly where you point it.

Probe moves like a cheetah on the road. A wide track not only gives Probe an aggressive stance, it helps avoid body roll and rear sway.

COURAGE AND CARE.

In the thrill of owning a sports car, it's easy to forget about those moments when something goes amiss.

Probe helps prepare you for such motoring emergencies. Power disc brakes, ventilated in front, give you sure-footed stopping power. This poise is enhanced by a four channel ABS anti-lock braking system.

In the event of heavy braking, the system allows short bursts of movement in the wheel.

Such small movement helps you to maintain steering and avoid skidding. On the open road at night, Probe's driving lights are invaluable.

Variable front intermittent wipers help you to see and avoid danger. The washing system extends to the rear window, too.

And in the event of a crash, an airbag supplemental restraint system (SRS) is provided for both driver and passenger.

THE SENSORY AND THE SENSUAL.

In order to appreciate one's driving experience to the fullest, one requires precise information about the status of the machine.

Probe's sports instrumentation keeps you informed in an instant. But with Probe, you're not just informed. You are illuminated.

A touch of the door handle illuminates the key hole on the door. Interior lights fade gradually after you close the door. A further light guides you to the ignition...an electronic ignition, of course.

Courtesy lights are in such thoughtful places as the glove box, ashtray, boot, and interior doors.

The thoughtfulness doesn't end there. Both sun visors have illuminated vanity mirrors. The centre console holds two drinks securely. And both the hatch and fuel filler cap can be opened by remote control from the driver's seat.

To be alert, the driver must be comfortable.

And Probe's exceptional level of comfort makes for a very alert driver, indeed.

Dark wool cloth upholstery conceals a number of power adjustments on the driver's seat. The side bolsters adjust at the flick of a button. The same with the driver's lumbar support. The seat recline has a mechanical memory function. No more searching for your favoured position after reclining the seat.

Probe's seats don't just recline...the rear seats fold forward in a number of different formations to accommodate different loads.

And the steering column is adjustable to help ease of handling. Electronic cruise control also helps make driving easier. To keep you entertained, Probe features a five-speaker AM/FM stereo radio-cassette player, complete with Dolby Noise Reduction. Electronic tuning and power antenna combine to give you outstanding clarity for radio reception. As well as making it simple to use.

Yes, Ford Probe delights the senses in many ways.

It adds up to more than a momentary diversion.

It's an experience that's good for the soul.
